OPPICE OF THE DAILY APPEAL, The fourth of September has, from the earliest history of our city been the most trying day of the year among our merchants, financiers and bankers. Perhaps as great a number of bills and notes matured here vesterday as ever before on a single day, even before or since the war, and it is a matter of congratulation that Notaries Pkblic had but little business to perform. The day did not prove a rich harvest to them by any means, for the quantity of paper protested was unusually small. The credit of every mercantile house of standing was fully sustained and few notes were dishonored.

The money market was extremely tight, but currency, though scarce, was in sufficient supply to meet all engagements. Numerous merchants, sought favors from the banks, and in every case where properly endorsed received accommodation, landing were made at 87%c and 209 from commercial credit was protected. The banks have exhibited great liberality, and no complaint was heard from any worth $21 in store. Hay sold, to arrive, quarter except the one of general strin-at $24 for choice. During the past season our banks and merchants have conducted the safest and most cautions business transactions. Credit has been extended only in instances where parties were known to be of undoubted solvency, and thus when pay day appeared all were prepared to meet obligations. We await the coming of cotton anxiously, and expect by another week the daily arrivals of new bales will be numerous. Ample arrangements have been made to house the crop, both financially and otherwise. Merchants are clearing up and painting offices and stores, capital is being collected, correspondents and igents in other cities are being arranged with, and every preparation is making to transact the heavy business anticipated. Orders for cotton purchases from the spinners of the Eastern States, and for Enropean account, are expected to be largely increased during the coming scason, as the reputation of Memphis as a 1sc. Already our wholsale dry goods and boot and shoe dealers are busy filling orders for country merchants, while large stocks are constantly arriving and keeping clerks busy, day and night, unpacking and arranging them.

We congratulate our readers on the events of yesterday, and upon the bright prospects in view. Our merchants are alive to these facts, a proof of which is the appearance in our columns this morning of many new business cards, to which the attention of the public is directed.
